Hosting Upgrade Appeal

Dear Visitor. The Tap has become increasingly busy over the last few weeks with many more visitors and sign ups. It's currently creaking and slowing. We need a hosting account upgrade to help cope with the increased activity and keep this free blog online. In this age of great change The Tap is a valuable independent resource where we can come together and share information the controlling parasites would rather we didn't have. It would be sad to lose it but it costs to keep it going and free to use. If any of you can help donate even a small amount towards the hosting upgrade that would be a big help. Your small donation makes a huge difference. Thank you in advance. Click here to donate

Miles Mathis and Freemasons

"And here we are, once again, racking our little brains over the validity and authenticity of Mr. Miles Mathis. Apologies for joining discussion almost two months late. However, it seems Mathis has critics that, for whatever reason, are intent on questioning his voluminous research. I have stated here in the past that Mathis is not what he wants us to believe he is. And while his work does present rather compelling evidence of fakery or, if nothing else, a concerted effort by nefarious individuals or groups to deceive the public at large, using all the mass deception weapons of television, media, journalism, radio, and publishing, his research still falls short of the mark.

Mark, there is simply no reason to apologize for that story you ran years ago exposing some very obvious incongruities with the claims Mathis has made over the years. Unlike you, I do not find his work compelling, or meaningful, or important. Mathis has the greatest convenience in the world writing his own facts without burden of proof, other than what he sources from Wikipedia (a well-known disinformation weapon), photographs he finds on the web, or so-called "super-computers" like Intelius and Findagrave.

Ronald Unz's article and Mathis' rebuttal are quite comical, really. In his response, Mathis resorts once again to his Phoenician Navy stronghold, claiming Unz is an agent acting on behalf of this ancient group of mythic mariners who control the world—and have controlled—for the better part of 6000 years. That is, at least, Mathis' latest figure, but still falls well short of the figure I stated here months ago: More like 12,000 years ago, or the point at which we find traces and artifacts of ancient symbolism which is still here among us today, and actually is printed on that dollar bill in your pocket. Yes, indeed, the Great Miles Mathis conveniently proves that the hidden hand is a secret signal from a mythic cabal of magical mariners roaming the seas and running the world for just 6000 years. And what proof does he proffer to support such grand speculations? A vast and preposterous encyclopedia of spurious genealogical research that he has tailored to suit his own unethical and non-peer-reviewed research. What a wonderful position Mathis holds in the world of research. Able to drop every little bit and bob of personal research to the world without cross examination. To those who object, criticize or question his methods or conclusion—well, he has a simple answer for that as well. They are nefarious agents who work in the sub-basements of Langley and their sole purpose—in fact the entire agency's purpose—is to suppress his groundbreaking and earth-shattering revelations which will, unopposed, change the entire course of human history and, beyond that, the destiny of the human race forever.

A first-year psychology student at community college could diagnose text-book megalomania and delusions of grandeur at first glance. But upon deeper inspection might conclude what I have known for many years. Miles Mathis is the largest and most nefarious psy-op the world has ever known.

Mathis would have me believe that the writings of Shakespeare were perpetrated by a secret cabal deeply hidden in the House of Stanley, yet in the same breath defends his patently absurd output of 100+ volumes of research in a mere matter of 10 years? Mathis would have me, a man deeply read in the classics, medieval literature, Renaissance history, literature, and poetry, a man who has read everything from Chaucer and Boethius to Dickens,

Scott, and Thackeray, that one man, one man alone, could have produced the amount of writing that Mathis claims his own. Not to mention he has himself claimed that the writings of Thackeray, Dickens, and Scott were all written by a sub-committee of British intelligence agents working deep cover during the whole of the Nineteenth Century. And his explanation for this: A single man could simply not produce 40 volumes of 1000-page novels over the course of a single lifetime! Hah! Talk about irony!

For Mathis, his villains are shape-shifters over the years. First it was warmongers at the Pentagon and inside the Military Industrial Complex; then it was the Diaspora; then again, it was the Antient Lords and Nobles of the English Peerage; then again, it was the Intelligence Agencies, DHS, the CIA; but now currently, it is the pernicious Phoenician Navy from the Ancient Land of Phoenicia, who bear the mighty coat of arms emblazoned with the double-headed Phoenix. Every great storyteller throughout history has told the same story, only the heroes and heroines have changed names, the villains and enemies as well. Mathis has been telling me the same story, he being the heroic aggrandizement of his own bizarre and twisted Narcissism and megalomaniacal self-obsession, and the enemy being a dastardly group of evil mariners, gilded over with vast amounts of wealth and splendor. Mathis points his finger in a lot of convenient directions, but never in the correct one: The Antient and Accepted Rite of Freemasonry. The true seal of the Phoenix. I'll let Miles himself proffer preposterous origins of that symbol to his gullible and uneducated readers. But never shall such absurd lies pass the threshold of my life's study and work. No, sir, Sir Mathis, there is one man on this planet who chuckles quite heartily at the preposterous stupidities you serve the ignorant. And while many of your sycophants have levelled every ad hominem available to their forked tongues against me, nary a one has so much as put a dent in my iron-clad ego.

Knowledge truly is power. But not the knowledge of a single man. For all his titanic, self-professed erudition, Miles simply cannot find the origin of the hidden hand, or the Phoenix. And yet the origin is so simple once one discovers the owners of those symbols, and the very root of all their symbolism. In fact, the symbolism is everywhere, for every eye to see. Every crank and crackpot will tell you they are pedophiles, human traffickers, Luciferians, rapists, etc. But that is merely the misguided misunderstandings of commoners. See, the Freemasons are nothing more than builders. And they have built everything. Yes, everything. From the First Temple of Solomon (one of the highest priests of the Order), to the Great Pyramids, the aqueducts of Rome, the magnificent cathedrals and palaces scattered across Europe, and to the very Capitol of this nation—the Freemasons have built. They build, they build, they build, they build. And, occasionally, they convince you that they built a vehicle that could land on the moon. And while their own exoteric historians trace the Order's origin to the masonry guilds of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth centuries, that is merely generous obfuscation. But the esoteric historians of the Order, men whose histories lay deeply hidden amongst dusty tomes, trace the origin to a more distant epoch of human history, so dark and distant only the secret libraries of the Order, reserved only for highest order of initiates, possess their ancient secrets. And secrecy, after all, is their greatest single weapon. And it is the very same impenetrable veil of secrecy behind which the Order has operated since the dawn of human history.

So how is it the greatest Renaissance man of the Twenty-first Century has failed to trace anything back to the Order? How is it that Miles Mathis, throughout his myriad journeys through the English Peerage, name after name, eminent person after eminent person, famous family after famous family, missed the gold ring? Has failed time and again with each paper on each historical figure to attribute the single greatest connection amongst all of them? Perhaps Mathis, like all of us, simply cannot penetrate that final veil of secrecy. Yes, perhaps, Mathis has hit the same wall we the uninitiated will hit today, tomorrow, and forevermore.

But let me talk more specifically why I find the Mile Mathis entity to be too fabulous and fantastic for my mortal senses. Firstly, his output. And while he claims all the greatest writers throughout history were committees, Shakespeare and James Joyce among them, based solely on their prodigality, yet he claims it's perfectly possible that his production is possible by a single man. Well, the researchers over CF have done the math, and it simply doesn't add up.

Secondly, Mathis' arrival on the conspiracy scene is odd. He missed an entire decade of speculation and research on 9/11 before CF finally figured it out. And once their research bore great fruit, here comes Miles Mathis, not only not claiming any theory himself, but also taking aim at the research performed exhaustively by the researchers at CF. His work on the Boston Bombing was abysmal, if not downright misleading. Not only Dave McGowan cracked that nut, but CF had stripped it down to its bare-naked fraudulence. Mathis has a paper on Sandyhook, but clearly did not beat the boys at CF on that scoop. Miles, in fact, seemed to reiterate all the most stirring points uncovered almost less than 24 hours after the event by CF. And so now appears Miles Mathis, writing paper after paper on genealogy after genealogy, leading readers into the weeds of the Anglo-Saxon Peerage of the Realm—a document, by his own example, he knows absolutely nothing about. I find it no coincidence that Mathis appeared on the scene after CF had started to provide deeply incriminating visual evidence that 9/11, Sandyhook, and the Boston Bombing were all patently false. Not only that, but the mainstream US media was its driving force. Very coincidental. In fact, too coincidental to be coincidence. Never mind that only a few years ago CF, in a very vigorous thread, thanks in part to Miles' agitators, Josh Guetzkow, Vexman, Jerrod Magnusson, et. al, outed Mathis as a nefarious and sophisticated psy-op. And I quote directly from that forum thread: "It's a nasty high level disinformation outlet that gives away some low hanging fruit while simultaneously obscuring legitimate research and running cover for the bigger lies like 9/11." How coincidental that Miles Mathis appears out of nowhere in the early part of the last decade to start covering honest research with billows and billows of smoke? Just like the demolition of the Trade Center, covered over in vast billowing clouds of man-made smoke.

Thirdly, the strange and inexplicable dissolution of CTTF. Miles has neither addressed his reasons for closing that blog, nor explained his bizarre divorce from his most adamant and relentless sycophant and defender Josh Guetzkow, who has since completely and utterly vanished from the scene, even after making an appearance on the House floor to discuss vaccines. Apparently, a dear friend of Professor Guetzkow died during the attacks of October 7th, but this doesn't agree with Mathis' premise that the whole attack was staged and fake. Miles ridiculously sloughed it off as Josh being compromised, or some such nonsense, but no adequate explanation has, or ever will be, given. Not to mention his other menacing committee of cohorts, Jared Magnusson and Vexman, have completely vanished from the scene as well.

And finally, the Anglicisms and Britishisms. And while this may seem the least innocuous, for me it indicates Miles Mathis is not the only author of his voluminous works. His opus is riddled with Anglicisms throughout. Take this for what it is, but too important to overlook, and deeply troubling at best.

I guess it would be one thing if Miles Mathis came along a few years after 9/11 and started his whole Peerage / Phoenician Navy / Intelligence Agencies / Hollywood / Jews / Media schtick. But is another thing entirely that he showed up more than a decade later, when serious researcher like CF had basically stripped 9/11 to the bare-naked media fraudulence that it was. And then further slaughtered the culprits and perpetrators of Sandyhook, the Moon Landing, Boston Massacre, and all the other myriad minor deceptions the media tries to perpetrate against a gullible and idiotic public. So here come the great, the brilliant iconoclastic Miles Mathis, telling us of the Peerage of the Realm, pulling us into the weeds of Anglo-Saxon etymology by way of his spurious and idiotic, albeit amateurish, attempts at genealogical research. Not just the current fakery of media, i.e. Moon Landing, 9/11, Sandyhook, Boston Massacre, etc., but look here eager minds, now awaking from your slumbers! Look here at the Peerage. Look back into the gloom of ancient history to find a mythical race of mariners, who have sailed the Seven Seas for 6000 years, only to consolidate the world's resources and keep you perpetually in darkness. Never mind the vast strides of human enlightenment and knowledge since the Renaissance. Never mind all the technological advances of the Twentieth Century. That was all a ruse by the Phoenician Navy. It's all fake. Forget the media's bloody hand in the 9/11 made-for-tv movie. No, look here. Look at the Anglo-Saxon peerage. Turn your eyes to the House of Stanley. Look even further into the misty seas of the past, where shines a gleaming little seaside country in the Levant. Look there, fools. Don't look at what happened on 9/11. Ignore those clowns over at CF. Look at me! Read my two-million words of brain-numbing and mind-boggling redundancy. Oh, and by the way, good luck disproving me. The amount of time and study required to disprove even a single paragraph of my outlandish claims would take nearly half a lifetime. So just accept it as truth because I showed you a few choice sentences at—of all sources—Wikipedia! Lol! I can only laugh at the stupidity of the ignorant.

Frankly, it's all quite obvious to me now. Miles Mathis has blown, over legitimate research, a smoke cloud 100 times the size as that over Southern Manhattan on that grim day. In fact, I can think of no greater symbol of Miles Mathis than that giant smoke cloud over Southern Manhattan on that ominous and terrible day. The day the Freemasons demolished the pillars of Joachin and Boaz and sent a tsunami of fear and trembling over the entire planet—their planet, I might add.

TELL US, MASTER MILES MATHIS! COME HERE TO POM AND TELL US ALL HERE IN THIS THREAD WHAT IS THE ORIGIN OF THE DOUBLE-HEADED PHOENIX, TELL US WHAT THE ORIGIN OF THE HIDDEN HAND IS, TELL US WHAT THE ORIGIN OF THE ALL-SEEING EYE IS, TELL US WHAT THE POINT WITHIN A CIRCLE MEANS! AHAHAHAHAHA!

Contained in all great deceptions are found tasty grains of truth. They put some revelations inside the deception. Then destroy the source's credibility at the end. 'Mathis' is still worth a read, but as with all sources, be on your guard! I email many to gauge whether they come across as real or human. Mathis didn't even reply.
